The other car was owned by Clifford McFarland of Delhi, cut about the rear, Harold Mason of Delhi, cut about head and face; Fred Bell of Delhi, cut about the body.

Those in the Hungerford car had been in Kingston attending a wedding and were on the way back to Newburgh when they met the car from Delhi. Both cars were quite badly damaged.

Literacy Tests For New Voters

New voters are those who became qualified to vote since January 1, 1922, and they are the ones required by law to show proof of literacy. These voters became qualified since that date by reason of attaining 21 years of age, becoming naturalized or acquiring legal residence in New York state.

In addition to other qualifications new voters must show proof of their ability to read and write English. The proof of literacy which all new voters must present to election inspectors is one of the following:

1. A diploma from an eighth grade elementary school in which English has been the language of instruction, or of a higher school.

2. A certificate of literacy issued by the school authorities under the rules and regulations of the regents. Pursuant to the rules of the Board of Regents, the literacy test for the city of Kingston will be given at the high school, on the following dates by Principal Frank L. Meagher of School No. 5:

October 15 from 7 to 9:30 p. m.
October 16 from 2 to 5 p. m. and from 7 to 9:30 p. m.
The literacy test will also be given to new voters on any school day until October 15 at School No. 5, Wynkoop Place, from 12 m. to 1 p. m. and on Monday, October 11 and Wednesday, October 13 at the high school from 7:30 to 9 p. m.

New voters presenting a statement signed by a school principal of having completed public school education up to the sixth grade or its equivalent will be issued a literacy certificate without examination.

The test given is not difficult. Upon passing it, the voter is given a literacy certificate which he produces at the time he registers.

New voters are urged to take this test at the earliest possible date.

Wadsworth and Mills Confident

Both Find Growing Sentiment in Favor of Change in State Administration—Now Speaking in Albany Area.

Salem, N. Y., Oct. 11 (AP).—Senator James W. Wadsworth, Jr., and Ogden L. Mills, Republican gubernatorial candidates, are confident of a Republican victory at the polls this fall.

Meeting for the first time yesterday since the Republican state convention at New York, the two principal standard bearers of the party this fall found opportunity at the home of Congressman James S. Parker to go over their individual campaigns and to draw the conclusions their contacts with voters in many sections of the state indicated had given them. Both found a growing sentiment in favor of a change in the state administration.

Today Senator Wadsworth and Congressman Mills carry the campaign into the Albany area, one of the strongholds of Democracy. Senator Wadsworth was to speak in Hooch Falls late today, and tonight both were scheduled to speak in Albany and Troy, both meeting later in the evening at Station WHAZ in Troy for radio addresses.

Continues Albany to New York Swim

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 11 (AP).—Unfavorable water conditions faced Mrs. Charlotte Moore Schoenmel of New York today as she continued her swim from Albany to New York in an attempt to break the six day record for the trip held by Mrs. Clemington Corson.

Mrs. Schoenmel took to the water again at Coeymans, 19 miles south of here, shortly after 8:15 a. m. The temperature of the water was 51 degrees, while that of the air was several degrees lower. The tide was in her favor, but a strong wind blowing up stream kicked up a choppy sea which worked to the disadvantage of the swimmer.

Mrs. Schoenmel planned to swim for three hours and rest for one hour, and to keep to this schedule during the daylight hours. Her trainers, however, doubted if the adverse water conditions would allow her to adhere to her plan.

ROOSEVELT WILL RESUME SPEAKING TOUR FRIDAY

New York, Oct. 11 (AP).—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, who returned here for treatment of a carbuncle on his neck, after he had completed a western speaking tour in the interests of Republican congressional candidates, will resume his speaking engagements Friday, when he will appear in Newark, N. J. This was announced today by Representative John G. Tibbels, eastern chairman of the Republican congressional and senatorial campaign.

Smith Plans to Answer Mills

Governor Decides to Devote Campaign Speeches to Charges of Extravagance—To End Campaign in New York City.

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 11 (AP).—Governor Smith's campaign speeches will take up charges of extravagance in state financing made by the Republican candidate, Ogden L. Mills. Opening his campaign along the southern tier with an address tonight in Oneonta, the governor will deal largely with what he terms the congressman's "hopelessly mixed" discussions of financing and to answer the charge that he is "Smith the borrower," and "Smith the spender."

The governor's attitude was made clear yesterday after a conference at the Executive Mansion with Justice Robert F. Wagner, Democratic candidate for the United States Senate, who will accompany the governor on his speaking trip.

After his address in Oneonta, the governor will go to the principal cities along the southern tier and will then proceed to Buffalo, Rochester, Syracuse and Utica, ending his upstate campaign in Albany, Troy and Schenectady. Soon after October 30, when he plans to be back in Albany, the governor will go to New York to remain until after the election.

CONSTANCE TALMADGE AND SCOTCH HUSBAND SEPARATE. New York, Oct. 11 (AP).—Constance Talmadge, the motion picture star, and her Scotch husband of seven months, Captain Alastair William Macintosh, have separated. Miss Talmadge is on her way to California and Captain Macintosh is about to return to England.

The separation, friends say, is amicable but permanent and will be followed by a divorce equally "friendly" just as she divorced her first husband, John Plafoglou, a wealthy importer. The reasons she gave for the divorce were that she wished to continue her screen career and found she could not do so successfully while wedded. The same reasons influence her again, her friends say.

Coolidge Lauds Legion's Efforts To Arouse Voters

Message From President Coolidge Praising American Legion For Stirring Dormant Voters To a Sense of Citizenship Duty Is Read at Convention.

Philadelphia, Oct. 11 (AP).—A message from President Coolidge, in which he praises the American Legion's effort to arouse the dormant voters of the country to a sense of citizenship duty, was read today before the eighth annual national convention of the legion. It was addressed to National Commander John R. McQuigg and read:

"It has been called to my attention that you are soon to have your eighth annual convention in Philadelphia. Will you be good enough at that time to express my greetings and best wishes to your comrades."

"It is a real pleasure each year to testify to my high regard for the American Legion, and to my great appreciation of the services which were rendered to our country by its members."

"The past tense does not adequately express my feelings. For truly patriotic citizens, the duties of peace are as vital as those of war. In a sense they are more so. Shirkers in peace time are to be condemned as severely as slackers during a war."

"I am particularly gratified to know that in cooperation with the national civic federation, you are throwing the splendid resources of your organization into the important work of arousing our citizens to take part in elections. We cannot retain our liberties under our representative form of government if we do not keep it representative. Too much stress cannot be laid on the necessity of 'getting out the vote.'"

"May you have abundant success in this and your other good civic works."

Pinchot Urges Clean Elections. Welcoming delegates of the American Legion to Philadelphia, on behalf of the state of Pennsylvania Governor Pinchot today urged them to stand up as good Americans for clean elections.

Before the governor addressed the convention, a message of greeting from President Coolidge was read in which he expressed his gratification that the American Legion was throwing its resources into the "important work of arousing our citizens to take in elections."

Governor Pinchot said there were two kinds of acts against liberty—force and cunning. An attack by cunning was more dangerous than an attack by arms. One of the cunning attacks, he said, was the refusal of citizens to vote.

"We want clean elections," said the governor, "and elections that are free of control of money."

"Throw yourselves into the war of peace with the same spirit as you did into the war of arms."

Ulster Garden Club Display

Tomorrow and Wednesday afternoons will be given over at the Governor Clinton Hotel to the beautiful display of the Ulster Garden Club, of flowers, fruits and table decorations. There is a sharp competition of the members for prizes for best floral arrangement of general character, best floral or other decoration of luncheon tables, and the finest and cheapest table setting and decoration, called the "economy tables." These last attracted much attention at the Poughkeepsie Flower Show recently, and while costing but a trifle, were very lovely. Mrs. Williams Carter won a prize on one of special charm.

The Woman's Exchange hope for great results, and needed money from the table they will have at the tea, where hats, baskets, snacks and other garden accessories will be sold as well as their delicious cakes.

It only costs a few cents to see all these beautiful displays, and included is tea and cake, or cider and crullers. The cider is warranted non-alcoholic. But the party will be of intoxicating gaiety and beauty.

Invite Merchants to Entertainments

Get-Together Community Meetings at Kerhouson and Lake Katrine This Week Furnish Opportunity for Better Acquaintance.

A number of Kingston's business men have remarked to Mr. Coe, Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, that they wished they had known about the recent meetings held at Gardiner at which time some Kingstonians attended the Get-Together meetings. At that meeting nearly 175 people of the community were pleasantly entertained by the program furnished by the Chamber of Commerce and they in turn took care of their visitors in a splendid manner.

The program furnished by the Chamber is purely local in nature, heard by Kingston people many times but new to the majority of communities outside.

Similar meetings to the one held in Gardiner are scheduled this week on Tuesday, October 12, in the Kerhouson High School Auditorium at 8 p. m., and another on the following night at Lake Katrine. The latter meeting will be held in the Grange Hall, also at 8 p. m.

The following entertainments will have a part in the program at Kerhouson: Miss Jessie Cowley, soprano soloist; Vincent Van Brumm and Helen Cushman, dance numbers; Fred Van Deusen, in his act of sleight-of-hand and legerdemain. Assisting very much, the Misses Flynn, Longoe and Knecht sisters, pupils of Miss Cushman, will also offer dancing numbers.

Miss Mildred Messinger will sing on Wednesday night in place of Miss Cowley.

The merchants of Kingston are earnestly invited to attend both of these meetings. It is believed, by those having the arrangements in charge that with the good-fellowship thus created will come a better understanding of each other's problems.

So far as possible those planning to attend are asked to meet promptly at 7 o'clock on each evening at the Chamber of Commerce office, 142 Broadway, in order that they may go in a body.

Transportation will be furnished for those not having cars, if notice is given before hand. If you wish same, call 504, not later than noon, the day of the meeting you wish to attend.

Poisoner Kills Valuable Dog

Strychnine Used by Cowardly Brute to Kill Valuable Pointer Owned by C. F. Doty of Albany Avenue—Dog Was Neighborhood Favorite.

Kingston is confronted with a new type of criminal who is giving the police authorities a severe test in an effort to apprehend him, that residents of this city might not further be subjected to such savage acts of violence.

One of the most dastardly acts ever perpetrated upon the public came to light early this morning, when Dr. Harold Clark, veterinarian, after several hours' work endeavoring to save the life of a valuable dog, discovered that the dog had been poisoned. Strychnine was used by the culprit to do away with the dog.

The latest victim of the brute or brutes was a valuable pointer, one of a breed of smooth-coated hunting dogs, owned by C. F. Doty, sales manager for the Kingston branch of the Sanford Motor Truck Company, who resides at 402 Albany avenue.

The dog was a pet of the neighborhood, where he had many friends, especially children. No reason for poisoning the dog is known.

The poisoning took place early Sunday evening and near the triangular block at Albany, Foxhall and Flatbush avenues. A reward of $25 will be paid by Mr. Doty to the person giving information that will lead to the arrest of the culprit.

Poisoning of dogs in this locality is nothing new to residents of this section, as four valuable dogs within the past few months have been victims. The police have a clue, which is expected to put a stop to these inhuman acts. Heavy sentences are meted out to persons guilty of this crime.

Delaware County Joke That Paid

Farmer's Gravel Bank Forest Wasn't as Funny as It Looked—Firm Believer in Slogan: "Plant Trees, It Pays."

Albany, Oct. 11.—Half an acre of trees planted on a gravel bank in Delaware county in 1909 were the joke of the country side. Today the trees are 30 feet high, the owner has multiplied his original plantation by 37 and the whole county is interested in making profitable use of such land as it is not suited to growing agricultural crops by planting forest trees on it.

In 1909, John Adams had on his farm a drumlin or glacial hill and was bothered by stones rolling down from it into the road. One day, in conversation with Clifford R. Pettis, superintendent of state forests, he asked if there was anything he could do to hold the stones in place. Pettis suggested planting Scotch pines which will grow in the poorest kind of soil. He made a plantation in 1909.

The idea of growing trees on a gravel bank impressed his neighbors as a good joke and it spread far and wide but the little trees caught and in 1910 he planted 1,000 more, 500 white pine and 500 Scotch. In 1911, he planted another thousand, half white and half Scotch. His trees grew and the older they got the more he planted. In 1917 he planted 1,000; in 1919, 2,000; in 1920, 4,000; in 1921, 4,000, and in 1923, 5,000. To his Scotch and white pine, he added Norway spruce in the later years and today has a dozen plantations ranging in age from 2 to 17 years and in height from two to thirty feet growing on land that is better suited to growing trees than for agricultural purposes. These trees he bought from the Conservation Commission at from $2 to $4 per thousand.

He was one of the pioneers in the reforesting movement in Delaware county and has seen the yearly plantings in the county grow from a few thousand trees into the hundreds of thousands. Up to the close of 1909 there had been planted in Delaware county 76,675 trees. By the close of 1925 this figure had risen to 1,252,500 and up to the first of October, 1926, to 1,743,150 trees.

He is a firm believer in the slogan: "Plant Trees, It Pays."

ANCIENT RELICS FOUND IN ASINE

Swedish Excavators Uncover Rare Objects in Peloponnesian City.

Stockholm.—Three hundred years of art objects, including pottery, metal, bronzes and jewelry, of coins, of skeletons, is one result of the Swedish archaeological mission's four months' digging in Greece. Another result is the proof that Asine, where the excavations were made, is the most ancient city, the home of which has for years been borne by the neighboring city of Argos, also in Argolis of the Peloponnese.

The mission has returned to Stockholm, and after its finds have been classified by savants, they will be placed on exhibition. After two years, however, all must be returned to Greece, for such is the arrangement entered into by Crown Prince Gustaf Adolf with the government at Athens five years ago, when he, as president of the Swedish Archaeological society, personally obtained the concession. Since then every year, from April to July inclusive, the society's mission has delved on the site of where pre-Mycenaean and Peloponnesian people once lived, worked, played and built.

This year the mission dug over an area of 60,000 square feet, and with the aid of fifty native workmen went down to bedrock, where the pre-Mycenaean remains were uncovered. The results are far more numerous and valuable than any before, the particular features of which are being communicated to the crown prince.

Advantage to Both Sides.

Before he left Stockholm he personally supervised the classifying and packing of the relics brought to Sweden in 1923 and directed their return. His idea is that, aside from bringing Sweden into personal touch with the past of Hellas, both Greece and Sweden will profit by the arrangement in other ways. Greece will obtain collections all duly sorted, classified and catalogued, which she probably could not otherwise obtain, while Swedish archaeologists and anthropologists may study specimens at home with a constant view to new discoveries. Many of the most valuable finds of former excavations have only revealed their ultimate worth under the microscope in Stockholm. It is expected that the results of this year's work will not be an exception, particularly owing to the large number of articles brought away and the impossibility of giving them complete examination on the spot.

The excavations this year were principally confined to the citadel, the upper and lower towns on the Barbuta hill and the necropolis, first discovered in 1922, which stretches from the lower town to the plain at the base of the hill. In both the upper and the lower towns they dug down to bedrock, disclosing as they went the remains of successive cities. Near the top they found a valuable relic of the Mycenaean culture, a Roman bath with its pools, cisterns and canals for hot and cold water, all in nearly a perfect state of preservation.

Farther down they came upon the ruins of dwellings belonging to the Mycenaean and pre-Mycenaean ages, and found the cyprian wall, six feet in breadth, had surrounded at least three cities at different successive elevations, for its foundations went down to bedrock, where it had been built over by Mycenaean structures of 1500 B. C.

Skeletons in the Necropolis.

One of the most interesting finds was in the necropolis, where in one tomb were uncovered the complete skeletons of a man and woman lying side by side with outstretched hands and bended knees. In the tomb, with other skeletons were discovered a quantity of jewelry and coins, many of which, of more ancient origin than the rest, have not yet been identified. It is believed that among the jewelry, coins and bronzes, many unique specimens may be brought to light, for the remains of the remote Peloponnesian, who antedate all others.

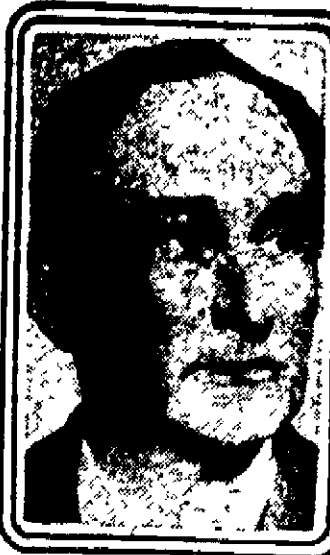

On the side of the Barbuta hill the excavators found that the tomb had been cut from the solid rock, dating, like the remains of the strata of cities, from the pre-Mycenaean, the Mycenaean and Hellenic, up to the Graeco-Roman, only a few feet beneath the modern surface. In this tomb were discovered early Christian remains.

In the necropolis of the earlier period 25 tombs were opened and investigated. The objects found in these are of the bronze age and are said to testify to the art and culture of pre-Hellenic Asia, which legend ascribes to one of the "sons of Asine" thrown to the depths of the sea by the god Poseidon. The skeletons found and taken away are expected to add considerably to the knowledge of the antiquity of ancient Hellas and will suggest questions of ethnic origin.

Aside from its archaeological interest the Mycenaean necropolis was found valuable as "checking" on the archaeological record of the upper and lower cities of Asine. The necropolis was divided into two sections, easily distinguishable by the general construction, revealed with little trouble on account of the slope of the hill. The situation was suggested by the artistic arrangement of the tombs and the richness of the objects displayed in them.

In one section the tombs are cut to considerable depth and have passages leading into them and contain artistic pottery, statues, weapons and ornaments surrounding the skeletons, while in the other section the tombs are much simpler and contain only articles of food, chiefly pots of meal and primitive household utensils.

In the opinion of members of the Swedish mission these sections, however, belong to the same Mycenaean age, but were probably destined for two different classes of the population, one for the leaders, the mighty, and wealthy, the other for the populace.

The mission has abundant faith that when a thorough examination has been made of the relics, not only will articles of great intrinsic value be revealed, but there will also be identified relics which will throw a stronger light upon the hitherto legendary peoples of the Peloponnese. The examination, it is expected, will not have been completed by the return of the crown prince in midwinter.

Other, Freak Fisher, Spurns Cash Offers

New York.—An otter, an aquatic, tawny, fish-eating mammal, arrived at New York zoological park and already his keeper, Henry Landsman, finds himself unable to fill his engagements.

In South American countries the otter is used as an adjunct to fishing. The owner puts a collar on the neck of the otter, gives him a long line of rope and whistles: "Otter, do your stuff." The otter does. He chases the fish in the general direction of the boat and the fisherman gathers them in.

An old sea captain presented the otter to the Bronx institution. Friends of the administration were reported to have offered the keeper a liberal sum for the animal with a view toward presenting it to President Coolidge, but the otter himself refuses to go.

Landsman now has the otter tamed and wherever he goes, the flattened, short-legged, web-footed bewhiskered mammal follows. He stands seven inches above ground and is thirty-eight inches long, twenty-two inches of which is tail.

Sea Targets Hit at

Distance of 7 Miles

Newport News, Va.—What artillery experts hail as the most accurate long range gunnery of the year marked the recent big gun battle practice at Fort Belvoir near here, in which soldiers of Battery E, Fifty-second coast artillery, at a distance of more than seven miles, scored a direct hit on a small moving target measuring barely 500 feet.

Another convincing demonstration of the accuracy of the high powered railway guns was in use for sea coast defense was given by the same soldiers. During the maneuvers an imaginary battleship steaming up the James river, upon reaching a point 12,000 yards off Fort Belvoir, was hit eight times within 1 minute and 30 seconds. Any few of the hits would have sunk a ship. It was ended.

Jungle Tree Produces

Rich and Creamy Milk

New Haven, Conn.—Engineers in the Central American jungle may find a substitute for the milk of animals in a tree that has just come to scientific attention. The arboreal cow is "milked" by cutting the bark and the liquid that pours forth is rich and creamy, plentiful and sweet to taste, according to its discoverer, Prof. S. J. Board of the department of forest products at Yale university.

Several other varieties of cow trees grow in tropical South America, but thus far the one in Guatemala is the one found Farthest North on the continent of North America. Scientists say that its occurrence in Guatemala is a matter of interest since a related species in Colombia is said to yield chicle, the basic principle of chewing gum.

Omaha, Neb.—An examination is being made at a local hospital of the six-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Harris of McCook, Neb., who was born with his heart on the right side of his body. The physicians hope to determine what has caused the unusual location of the vital organ. The baby is apparently in good health. Dr. J. J. Keegan says, and, aside from the slight difficulty he experiences in breathing, there is no need for medical treatment.

Amsterdam, Holland.—Dutch women who wish to reduce are receiving encouragement from certain smart tea rooms which advertise special reducing menus.

Whipped cream, cakes, and rich pastry are replaced by water ices, brown bread and lettuce sandwiches and tea with lemon at these shops. The dieting Dutch women are usually among the younger generation and find that French fashions and Dutch dishes are hard to reconcile.

Typewriting to Music

In a certain college in London, England, girls learn typewriting to the accompaniment of fox trots and military marches. If a girl has a good sense of rhythm, this system hastens the early stages of training in a remarkable way. Gramophone records are used, and pupils first type words of three letters to a military march in four-four time, one letter to a beat and the space movement to the fourth. Progress is then made in words of different lengths, until finally whole sentences are typed. When speed increases, students type two letters to each beat. The idea behind this system is that regular rhythmic movements are less tiring than irregular ones, which waste the worker's energy.

Wild Holds Its Own

The persistence of the wild life close to the haunts of man and his works is more than remarkable. When man first intruded into the wilderness places wild animals were his easy prey. They did not know anything about him and probably looked upon him only as some fellow animal who had come to share their lot. They were disconcerted that enough and they learned quick lessons from disfigurement.

Today wild animals know how to care for themselves. For years their numbers rapidly decreased, but when man believed that the vanishing point almost had been reached there were signs of increase. All the animals had become "sassy."

Uneven Hemlines for Autumn Wear

Two-Color Effects Also Indicated by Showings in Paris.

The question of the moment in circles sartorial is—what changes are to be inaugurated for autumn? It is generally felt that there will be more of elegance and intricate style, that the bloused back and the more elaborate hat are certain to be featured. Beyond that, no one cares to predict. As a Paris fashion correspondent in the New York Herald-Tribune.

The Parisienne, having found a slim, youthful line eminently becoming and practical for all purposes of a life that is filled with diverse occupations, refuses to be persuaded to adopt any other. During the Grande Semaine, at all race meetings, garden parties, private receptions and balls it was the slender silhouette with the skirt just covering the knee, a little longer in the case of older women, with sufficient fullness to permit freedom of movement, that was the right one.

Of course, some individuals appeared in full bell-shaped skirts, and a few in the picture gowns of the early eighteen thirties. There are always certain women who ignore fashion and create a mode for themselves. During the recent weeks in Paris, however, they were out of harmony with the picture.

The uneven hem is destined to be a sign of chic during autumn, especially for evening and afternoon gowns. It gives a chance to the woman whose ankles are somewhat short of perfect, and helps her to have a short skirt that still provides some of the kindly veiling usually only possible in a long one.

The same may be said of asymmetrical effects. Some of the most successful Prix des Dames and Grand Prix gowns had the fullness cleverly arranged so that on one side it had a greater importance than on the other. This is a touch that at once gives a dress the atmosphere of the haute couture, for it breaks away from the uniformity of the little straight gowns that are turned out in the thousands by dressmakers of lesser grade.

Two-Piece Jumpers Popular.

Two-piece jumper dresses, though less in the forefront of the picture for town dresses, still carry off the palm where sports clothes are concerned.

Two-color effects have been much used in the latter part of the season. These need careful treatment, for it is not every one who can achieve the results that seem to come naturally to a Paquin, a Lelong or a Worth. The two-color scheme, however, is an important factor, and one that has met with sufficient success to assure its continuance in the autumn.

The whole color question is one that preoccupies the minds of women and dressmakers alike when it is a question of choosing new frocks. The lovely pastel shades that have been worn all summer will remain with a softer and warmer note introduced to make them suitable for alliance with winter furs. Beautiful shades of red with a touch of chocolate brown have been seen in some of the chief dressmakers' atteliers. With these will be used all the soft pinks and delicate faded shades of rose that are so instantly becoming.

Perhaps it would be too rash to prophesy that the mode could turn entirely away from boyish simplicity to a single reason—undoubtedly some of the haute couture, clinging tenderly to the habit of years, will prefer styles which will again make a fetish of the mode garcones. But the vast majority will turn, hungrily, to the almost forgotten art of intricate styling, retaining at the same time the attractive elements of recent fashions.

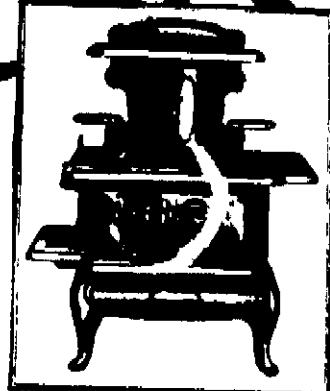

Men Will, the American female champion, is to be seen in one of the more fanciful genre of sports frocks which has developed since the Lexington-White-Oakville struggle on the Riviera. Designed by Jean Patou, it consists of a beige Jersey sweater with on ornate design printed in yellow and brown, a beige scarf and a fuzzy striped shirt of beige marocain. It evidences a decided trend toward a new species of sports dress—more Paris than London in atmosphere.

Finally, there is a Chanel model which sports contra-simplicity in its every line. Made of white cotton

The Fashion Shows.

Reports of the Paris openings are being broadcast around the world, and supplementing these are the New York autumn fashion shows to aid in speeding the new season on its way. If you have scanned the accounts of these openings in the past you will realize that they cloud, rather than clarify, the style situation and that all you eventually glean from them is a mass of conflicting ideas.

There are several reasons for this. In the first place, as far as Paris is concerned, midsummer is the hay-mak-

"Worth sponsors diamonds," and if you read the cable you will immediately form the erroneous impression that the new Worth collection, instead of featuring only a single diamanté model, makes that trimming the most important item in its autumn showing.

The New York openings are not so prone to misconception, but there is always the danger that Paris may not be in accord. Except for a handful of individual showings by some of the exclusive shops the New York fashion shows are group affairs—many of the models are purchased in Paris two and three months before and a large proportion of the original designs are based on the early professional showings of the French couture. Naturally, therefore, the American style shows are not as advanced as their Paris prototypes, and while they usually exploit the keynote of the new season, there are many times when they miss the mark.

It is wisest, then, not to be too deeply disturbed by the early autumn reports. You are going to hear a lot of conflicting news this season. You will read much of longer and shorter skirts, of waistlines that are high and waistlines that are low, of magnificence and of simplicity, of elegant military and of garcones clothes. Much of this will have no greater foundation than the Worth incident mentioned above. Other accounts will come from authentic and authoritative sources.

In Pajama Costumes.

It created a sharp sensation several years ago when the news was relayed round the world that the Lido ladies were parading the public promenades clad in pajama costumes. It did not matter that these costumes were almost as elaborate as evening dresses and that for resort purposes they were comparatively discreet—the pertinent fact was that smart matrons had ventured into the open, wearing what was formerly considered the quintessence of the robe intime.

One of the characteristics of the Lido pajamas is the infinite variety of its forms. Some models have trousers that fit snugly to the ankle and have a little strap passing under the foot to hold them in place. Both Matysse and Lenoir have made charming costumes along these lines.

On quite opposite lines are other chic models worn along the fashionable Lido. One that has been designed for wear at a Spanish country club is made of an exquisite printed crepe de chine that is furnished by Dubouche. Its trimming of heavy white fringe makes it a most original and appealing

Great Metropolis Has Seen Many Reverses

London existed as a town before the Romans licked it into shape behind the great wall that still can be traced. If tradition may be accepted, the Thames was unconfined and spread sluggishly among the reeds; the tide came up, forcing it to form backwaters and inundating the wide tracts of marshes. A thousand years after the Romans left, the houses, thatched with reeds, still were overlooked by woods and thickets, inhabited by deer and wild boars and the swamps were alive with bittern and duck. All the time London was growing, but on a settled plan. The process of development was continually interrupted, yet after each check it went on again. Boadicea destroyed it; the Danes wiped it out; Alfred the Great rebuilt it and within a century it was burned to the ground. Thereafter, fire and pestilence swept over it at frequent intervals, but it emerged stronger from every trial. London refused to be removed from the map, and its permanence was a visible expression of the determination of its people and a vindication of its position as a world mart.—Van-couver Province.

"Mother of States"

This name is applied to Virginia because so many states have been carved from her original territory. At the time of the settlement of Jamestown the name Virginia was applied to all that part of North America lying between the thirty-fourth and forty-fifth degrees of latitude, extending from coast to coast. This region now comprises the greater part of the United States. When Sir Francis Drake circumnavigated the globe he stopped on the coast of California which he spoke of as "the back of Virginia." Seven states have been carved from the territory claimed by Virginia at the time of the Roanoke, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Kentucky and West Virginia.

 Dainty Mary Brian, the "movie" star, created the role of Wendy, in "Peter Pan." She was born and educated in Dallas, Texas. Since her previous success in "Peter Pan," she has appeared to wonderful advantage in "The Air Mail," "The Little French Girl," "The Street of Forgotten Men," and "A Regular Fellow."

As Told by
Irvin S. Cobb
IN HIGHER BRANCHES

FOURTH of July was supposed to be a holiday in a certain garrison of the regular army out West, but a grizzled old sergeant named Kelly, in charge of the guard house, had his own ideas about this holiday notion. After breakfast he ordered all his prisoners to line up outside their prison quarters. When they fell in he stationed himself facing them, and made a short speech:
 "There is no doubt in my own mind," he said, "but that a good many of you men should not be prisoners at all. You've neglected your opportunities, that's all. Some here has had education and should make good company clerks. Maybe there's some others amongst you who'd like to be company barbers and earn a little money on the side."
 A murmur of assent ran through the lines.
 "Now, this," went on Sergeant Kelly, "all you men who are educated or who think you can learn to do paper work, step two paces to the front. About half of the prisoners came forward.
 "Now, this, all who'd like to learn the barber's business advance two paces."
 All save two moved toward him with alacrity.
 The sergeant addressed the remaining pair:
 "What did the two of you do before you joined the army?" he asked.
 "We was laborin' men," answered one, speaking for both.
 "Very well, this all you educated guys take these here gunnysacks and pick up every scrap of paper around the parade grounds. And the rest of you, who want to learn barberin', you grab these here lawn mowers and cut grass until I tell you to leave off. You two laborin' men kin go back inside the tent and take a nap."

THE DESK

LITTLE do we stop to consider, when enjoying the various pieces of furniture with which we are surrounded in our homes, of a possible history which they might reveal, a bit of romance or color or breath of the past that may linger about them. The fact that almost everything that we use or touch in furniture as in the other amenities of modern life, harks back for its origin or its inspiration to long before the days when furniture factories came into existence, escapes a good many of us.
 For centuries man wrote on tablets or on other flat support. And the desk as we know it today was not consciously designed as a writing place. Rather like Topsy, it sort of happened, an offspring of that early progenitor of modern furniture, the chest.
 Chests at first opened on top; later, for purpose of convenience when something was placed over them, they opened down at the front, forming the cupboard with a door. Then came the cabinet chest, the chest with drawers underneath, and this, with the opening front above made slightly sloping, formed the desk, originally known as the "scrivener," which came into use about 1500, and is still very familiar today.
 With the addition of an upper cabinet, we have the popular "scrivener" desk, so beloved of the furniture designers of the "Queen Anne" period. The roll top desk is credited to Puritan and the modern sport desk had its inspiration in the school, the place of Elizabethan days.

Your Husband's Friends
 Probably one of the hardest tasks that confronts the newly married woman is that of adapting herself to her husband's friends. It does not always follow—in fact, it rarely follows—that because one has fallen in love with a man, one must also fall into friendship with his old school mates, his college pals, his golfing companions and his business associates. Half the time these gentlemen either bore her stiff or offend her taste and her sense of refinement. They may be good fellows to him, but they are sad failures as far as she is concerned.
 Yet it is a very unwise woman who throws cold water on her husband's friendships and makes his old chums feel awkward and unwelcome in his home. Perhaps—who can tell?—he feels the very same way about his wife's girl friends. May wonder how in the world she can endure such plain, uninteresting, silly chattering even while she is marveling at his fondness for the loud, gauche back slappers who haunt her pretty new home. Each forgets that such friendships are the result of propinquity of past good times together, of early acquaintance loyally kept up. The bride sees her friends in the light of their first confidences, their parties and dances. The bridegroom views his one-time pals through a haze of college pranks, hunting expeditions, and noontime luncheons.
 Well, it's up to the young matron to bridge this chasm and try to make her husband's friends feel welcome whether she enjoys them or not. It has a right to his associations, and one can only admire him for being loyal to his old companions. To try to find the interesting points of each one, to enter into their jovial reminiscences and listen sympathetically—this marks the tactful hostess and the thoughtful wife. Sometimes it is desperately hard to put up with raucous laughter, foolish jokes (funny to them but not to her), and offensive fable manners. But if she expects him to be courteous and agreeable to her friends, she must do the same for him, and receive his friends with cordiality and graciousness. Perhaps she will find that they are pure gold, even if in the pouch.

SEASONABLE DISHES
 A tasty salad is always in season and now with fresh green things in abundance one may have a variety of summer salads. Try slicing small green onions very thin, adding half of a green pepper more or less as one likes the flavor, cover with sour cream, adding a bit of salt and cayenne. A spoonful of mayonnaise may be added to season more highly if desired. Serve on lettuce. Cottage cheese served on lettuce with a spoonful of crushed fresh currants, sweetened very sweet, is another well-liked combination. When the fruit is not in season open a can that has been crushed with sugar and canned without cooking.
Combination Salad.—Shred a small head of early cabbage and cover with cold water to crisp. Arrange tender leaves of lettuce on salad plates and heap on the following combination well mixed with good mayonnaise: one finely cubed apple, one-half of a green pepper finely shredded, one banana sliced and chopped fine; add the cabbage; a bit of pineapple will not spoil the combination.
Strawberry Whip.—Mix one cupful of crushed strawberries with one-third of a cupful of powdered sugar. Beat the whites of three eggs and add one-third of a cupful of sugar and one-quarter of a teaspoonful of cream of tartar, beat again. Combine the mixtures and serve in sherbet cups or as a sauce on sponge cake.
Baked Beans With Sausage.—Par-boil one quart of navy beans after soaking them over night. When the skins crack, place them in a bean pot, adding three tablespoonfuls of molasses and salt to taste. Bake all day. One hour before serving place link sausages over the top and allow them to bake.
Cream Soup.—Chop one small turnip, one onion and one carrot. Cook these with two tablespoonfuls of rice, a pint of tomato, two teaspoonfuls of salt and two cupfuls of water. When the vegetables are tender, rub through a colander. Add a tablespoonful of butter and serve hot.

Back Upon Main
 Archaeological excavations have shown that the most elaborate of the early civilizations developed in the western hemisphere were all supported by maize. Foster Merley of the Smithsonian Institution showed how the decline and fall of the civilization of the Mayan empire was caused in part by the decline in the production of maize. The high cost of living, as he called it, was operating then as now.

Marked Liberty's Triumph
 The treaty of Versailles between Great Britain and the United States, ending the American Revolution, was signed September 3, 1783. Actual hostilities had ceased upon the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown on October 19, 1781.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

THE TREE FROGS

"When we're out in the big world," said Grandfather Tree Frog, croaking as he spoke, "we are wide awake when spring first comes."

"At the very first sign of spring we are ready to welcome it."

"We do not wait until spring has unpacked all her belongings and has really settled down."

"We do not want to miss a minute of spring so we are wide awake at the very first call, or rather—"

"Wake up! Wake up!"

waiver that spring gives.

"There are some creatures who wait until later. There are always some who do not in any case wake up the first time they are called."

"They have to be called again and again before they are actually awake and up."

"They say: 'Just a few minutes more and then I'll get up.'"

"Or they say: 'Just one more little dose and then I'll get up.'"

"But that is not the way it is with us when spring comes."

"Of course we have had long, long, long naps. But even people who have slept all they have really needed to sleep will urge for a few minutes more of sleep in the mornings when they are awakened."

"But that is not the way it is with us when spring first gives her earliest spring whisper."

"We can always hear it."

"We hear her say: 'Little Tree Frogs, I am here. I've not unpacked as yet, and I may still chat a bit with Old Man Winter and hear what he has done and he may tell me stories of cold weather.'"

"When he talks like that you know he gets excited and his cold voice grows louder."

"It is then that people say that it is most unreasonable weather."

"But no matter, you will get up I know. You will not wait for every day to be a really warm day."

"So spring talks to us in her whispering voice. Later she speaks louder and calls out to all the springtime flowers and the birds and the woods and the streams and the butterflies and the trees."

"I'm here. Wake up, wake up, wake up. Not another moment of sleeping."

"We begin to chirp or to pipe or to sing or make our bright little sounds—you may call them what you wish."

"Here in the zoo we're wide awake most of the time as we don't find any banks to sleep in for the long cold months."

"They are fond of us here in the zoo. They say that we are so cheerful and bright. They say that though we aren't unusual tree frogs we are very nice, pleasant ones."

"They say it is better to be cheerful and pleasant than it is to be unusual and very interesting."

"Well, our family gave some good concerts last summer, didn't they?" asked Grandfather Frog.

"So we heard," said the other frogs.

"They used to sing most joyfully in their funny little voices when it had been sunny and dry for a long, long time and when at last there was going to be rain, for they knew it—they could feel it in the air."

"Ah, then those who were looking forward to the rain would smile and say: 'The tree frogs are telling us that the rain is on the way.'"

"Nor did our family make any mistakes."

"We're good little weather prophets, eh, Grandfather?" asked the young Tree Frogs.

"You are indeed," said Grandfather Tree Frog, "and so have all the members of our family been for years even longer than I remember."

"So we will always be. Our songs of gladness when the rain is coming after a dry spell will be taught to all the little frogs as long as there are tree frogs in the world or in the zoo."

"And every little tree frog felt sure that what Grandfather Tree Frog said was quite, quite true."

"We are so cheerful."

"We are so cheerful."

"We are so cheerful."

"We are so cheerful."

"We are so cheerful."

"We are so cheerful."

"We are so cheerful."

"We are so cheerful."

Texas Company.

Babson Park, Mass., Oct. 11.—(Special)—There are two paramount factors in the minds of oil investors today, namely, the high level of the general stock market and the possibility of over-production of crude oil. One of the brightest spots in the situation is the continued large and increasing amount of gasoline that is being consumed every day throughout the United States.

Texas Company has been interesting security holders more during the past few months. It has been estimated, according to the "Wall Street Journal," that the company will show net profits equal to some eight dollars a share, and as such a showing would set a new high record representing a 33 per cent gain over 1925 earnings, the previous peak—it requires no stretch of the imagination to visualize a change in the dividend policy of the company within the next few months with the probabilities favoring an increase in the rate to either $3.50 or $4 per annum.

November 1 has been set as the time limit, according to "Harron's," for the deposit of Texas Company stock for exchange share-for-share into the new holding company.

The formation of the new company appears a thoroughly sound and advisable move, according to the "Oil Statistics Co.," and if all the stock is deposited this will still leave 3,422,000 shares in the treasury—an ample amount for a stock dividend as well as for other corporate purposes.

"$14.98, as advertised"

"How do you spell 'financially'?" asked a college student of his room-mate.

"F-i-n-a-n-c-i-a-l-l-y," said the room-mate, spelling out the word slowly.

As an afterthought, he added: "And 'embarrassed' has two r's and two s's."

How often have you said to a salesman, "That's more than I care to pay?"

If you had known the price in advance, you would have been spared this little embarrassment. That's one of the great services rendered by newspaper advertising.

By reading the advertisements before going to the stores, you know what you will have to pay for an article. You need not reveal your financial status to a salesman. You perhaps do not like to ask the price of goods anyhow. If the merchant has told you the price in his advertisement, you do not have to ask.

Any way you figure it out, it pays you to read the advertisements. Regularly!

The one advertisement you skip may contain just the news you would have welcomed. Read all the advertisements you can. Keep informed.

The intelligent way to shop is to read the advertisements and then go to the stores that offer the best values. Make notes beforehand of the articles that interest you. That's the way to get the most for your money. That's the way to save time.

When you know the price in advance, you can ask to be shown the goods "as advertised."

World's Fastest Wheel

The fastest revolving wheel in the world, according to estimates of experts, is the turbine wheel on the special supercharger of the airplane used by Lieut. John Macready in his recent attempts to better the world's altitude record. It revolves at the almost inconceivable speed of 60,000 revolutions a minute—almost 700 a second, says Popular Science Monthly. This is about twenty times the highest speed of an automobile crankshaft.

Salvagers Buy Steamer Irving

The Washington Irving of the Hudson River Day Line, which sank in the Hudson river last spring when it collided with an oil barge, is now the property of Morris & Channing Dredging Company of New York city. After the steamer was sunk the Day Line decided she was not worth salvaging and abandoned her to the insurance underwriters, who informed the government that it was its duty to remove the sunken vessel. The government advertised for bids for someone to wreck the Irving and tow the parts out to sea, where they could be sunk. The new owners made the low bid and were awarded the contract. They sent men down to examine the hull and found a hole 21 inches by 18 feet 4 inches.

Exact Time of Dawn

Important in East
Earlier careful studies of twilight duration were made by the Arabian astronomers, and there was a special reason. The Moslem religion prescribes daybreak—the beginning of dawn, or morning twilight—as one of the five daily hours of prayer. Moreover, during one month in the year a strict fast is observed from this time to sunset, says Nature Magazine of Washington. Hence as far back as the Eleventh century the time of daybreak at various seasons of the year had been determined with considerable accuracy. The same authorities distinguished between true dawn and an earlier faint illumination of the eastern sky known as "false dawn," frequently mentioned in the literature of the Orient. The line in the Rubaiyat "Before the phantom of false morning died," refers to this phenomenon. It is the sodical light, supposed to be due to sunlight reflected from fine particles of matter entirely outside the earth's atmosphere. It is best seen in low latitudes, especially in the pure air of tropical and subtropical deserts. In the United States it is visible at certain times of the year, but not where city lights prevail.

Too Risky

While Grant and Leota Whyteck were in France with Rex Ingram, they naturally made a number of friends, many of whom took great pride in their family histories. One family in particular had an album of which it was very proud and when the opportunity presented itself, nothing would do but that Grant and Leota must see the pictures. "And this one," said the hostess, after an interval, "was killed in a feud." "How distressing," exclaimed Leota. "I always feel nervous myself, when I ride in one of those cheap cars.—Los Angeles Times.

Accounts for Fools' Day

But for the enjoining of the calendar in 1564, April 1 might never have become All Fools' day. Several explanations have been offered as to the fixing of April 1 as the date for perpetrating practical jokes, but the changed calendar appears to be most probable. In 1564 New Year's day was shifted from March 25 to January 1. Before the alteration, the New Year festivities lasted eight days, ending on April 1. This final day was one set apart for paying visits and making gifts. When the alteration was made, muddle-headed folk became confused and were easy prey for the sophisticated, who sent them out on fool's errands, making calls and carrying gifts on the day of the discarded celebration. Thus the custom became the seed from which April Fool sprang.—New York Times.

Odd Rain-Making Device

As a pendant to the reaction of plants to weather the curious Seventeenth century belief in the weather's reaction to plants might be mentioned. Then it was the common practice to set fire to growing ferns in the belief that rain would follow.

Such implicit faith was placed in this expedient that when Charles I. arranged to visit Staffordshire, the earl of Pembroke and Montgomery wrote to the high sheriff of the county commanding him to stop the burning of ferns as his majesty was "desirous that the country and himself should enjoy fair weather as long as he remains in these parts."

In this custom, by the way, the Devonshire practice of "firing the bracken" took its rise.—London Mail.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creosolene, an essential creosote that is pleasant to take. Creosolene is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and breaks the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth. Of all known drugs, Creosolene is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat trouble. Creosolene contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, speeds the rest of the trouble and checks the growth of the germ. Creosolene is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory distress, and is essential for building up the system after outdoor life. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after subject according to directions. Ask your druggist. (Ad.)

The coats have more marks of late vintage than dresses. Why? Because the designers and the fabric manufacturers decided long ago what coats should be; in other words, the decision was made before the money panic in France was really upon them; therefore, they changed lines freely. The backs are bloused; the dolman sleeve is popular, the kimono line has its place, long stoles of fur, great panels of fur, shawl collars of fur are seen on velours, tweeds and velvet. Straightline coats started to bless the average figure. An altogether youthful mode is brought out in coats a little shorter than the really short dresses, so short that the hem of the dress is a decorative part of the ensemble.

So do not hesitate about writing a review about the book.

She has a gentle smile. The young girl, with short blonde hair and wearing a collared shirt with a dark tie, is sitting at the table, looking up at the woman with a happy expression. Thevenow and Alexander, Big Guns for Cards

Veteran Pitcher and Youthful Shortstop Turn Yankees Back—Nineteen Records Fell, Three Tied—$5,584.15 Apiece for Winners.

York, Oct. 11 (AP)—Earnest young athletes, whose vim, vigor and vitality gave the cowbells of St. Louis a chance to ring again when many Missourians feared they were to be forever mute, are speeding today to a glorious reception in St. Louis each one richer by $5,584.15. This goodly sum represents the real money to be paid each member of the St. Louis Cardinals as his part of the world series spoils.

At the same time the members of the New York Yankees are calculating the purchasing power of $3,417.75, and reflecting that the difference in the size of the checks was determined by one $50,000 run. The big run decided the seventh game of the world series, 3 to 2, with as much drama as any world series had produced packed into the vital game. The run was not the only $50,000 quantity involved. There was a $50,000 strike out engineered by the venerable but courageous Alexander, two plays by Thevenow valued at thousands each, and a hit by the same player worth more than its weight in gold. And too, there were a couple of misuses the Yankees would have handed over for nothing and given something to boot.

Alexander and Thevenow.

In the final pulsating contest, played under leaden skies threatening to weep with the Yankees at any moment, age and youth showed the way. Grover Cleveland Alexander, old enough to have been named for a President of the United States who held office more than two score years ago, and Thomas Joseph Thevenow, whose 23 years make him a mere juvenile, claimed between them the plate in the sunshine they would have if there had been a sun. The baseball has scarred, but not scared Alexander who was content to play a defensive role, but the dashing Thevenow, qualifying as a "money player," was a stonewall on the defense and a battering ram offensively.

"Pop" Fly Again Figures.

When he tucks away his check for $5,584.15 each Cardinal may reflect that he has to thank an old man, growing stronger on his way out of the baseball picture, and a bold strapping, with the legs of agile youth enabling him to leap into the air to grab balls labelled hits, and young eyes sharp enough to pick out pitches and hit them "where they ain't" before the curves. A factor in the seventh battle, Thevenow held the Cardinals fast in its grip last Thursday and helped the American Leaguers on to victory. Yesterday it was discovered that just in time to lose a world's championship, a pop fly was lost in that game and another hardly more than a "pop" bounded from the glove of a Yankee player and there went the ball game.

Alexander, who had no plan to permit Monte Munn to gain all the athletic honor that is Nebraska's to bestow, had no place in the original cast for the 7th game. He was content to sit on the bench with the comforting thought of a well pitched victory Saturday and another the previous Sunday. He was willing to let Jesse Haines do the heavy pitching for the afternoon.

Haines Knocked Out.

Fate decreed otherwise. The confident Haines, with a shutout victory in the series to spur him on, made his offortory program for the inspection of Yankee batsmen just one knuckle ball after another. The tall moundman found that too much knuckle balling is plenty and in the seventh inning he was shocked to discover that he had practically knuckle-balled himself out of the ball game. He had rubbed the skin from his pitching finger and his control was fast slipping from him.

Rogers Hornsby suspected that that Haines had thrown several knuckle balls too many, when he looked about and saw all the bases filled with ambitious Yankees. The Cardinal pilot decided that the big fellow from Phillipsburg, Ohio, needed some court plaster, obtainable only in the clubhouse, and thought, too, that there had been enough knuckle balls for one afternoon. Some good side-arm pitching seemed to be the prescription and Alexander the Great, growing greater as the series wore itself out, shuffled in from the bullpen to fill it.

No Room For Tony.

He did. He threw four times to Tony Lasser and three were strikes. As he was warmed up then, Alexander was quite willing to finish the game, turning all the Yankees back but Ruth, who was sent to first base when he refused to strike at three balls, just missing ninth inning corners of the plate.

Thomas Joseph Thevenow had the most satisfying afternoon of the 23 years. The strong-armed shortstop, who was born in Illinois but lives in Indiana, drove in two of the three runs the Cards counted and with two great fielding plays turned the Yankees back when less efficient work by the dashing youngster would have spilled the beans and gold for the men who were to take the first championship in years beyond the "Old Miss."

New Records For Babe.

Babe Ruth crashed his way to added glory in a series in which his presence alone made a new mark—seven for an individual. His three home runs in one game and a fourth in the closing struggle made editing of the record books necessary to insert eight for Ruth, and with the spray of swat, other marks crumbled. Four runs in a game, driving in as many, recipient of 11 bases on balls in the series and other minor efforts marked his activities during the seven games.

All told, 19 records fell and three others were tied.

For the third year in succession, the annual baseball classic was extended to its limit of seven games and for the third time in as many seasons the ultimate winner came from behind. The Yankees moved on the west with a one game margin, three to two.

The Yankees spent the series seeing advantages lost. In front with a first game victory, the series was deadlocked in the second game. St. Louis forged ahead on its first appearance before the home folk, only to see the count knocked again and then the invaders got out in front. The pinch hitting of Alexander and the pinch hitting of Thevenow stood out for the winners of the final game. Babe Ruth, colorful to the last, played the string out, getting a home run on his only chance to hit the ball, as he was passed four times. The great slugger also made a hair-raising catch, making his sensational fielding feats for the series three—a marvelous catch and perfect throw to retire a runner at the plate having made baseball history in previous games.

St. Mary's Holy Name Smoker

A splendid entertainment was afforded the members of St. Mary's Holy Name Society at their last meeting held in St. Mary's school hall. After the regular business meeting William Jordan, chairman of the entertainment committee, took charge of the meeting and introduced two Charleston dancers, who delighted the gathering with their novel steps while Bernard Coughlin passed clay pipes, tobacco and cigarettes among the men, which they enjoyed very much for the remainder of the meeting.

Bill Todd furnished several bouts for the occasion and Mr. Todd's program met with the delight of the 225 men present.

The first bout was between Charlie Fisher and Vince Coffey and these two well-known pugilists exhibited a fine showing which received a hearty response from the spectators. Charlie Ragsdale of East Kingston, who helps keep Vince Hart in shape, boxed four rounds with Vince who displayed Frenchy Dewigg and Kid Costello furnished the final bout and they also manifested that they were experienced pursuers of the many art. The program was concluded with a comedy bout by Charlie Fisher and Frenchy Dewigg after which the gathering left the hall expressing their approval of the event.

Big League Game Here Called Off

Rain caused the scheduled game between the Colonials and the Philadelphia Nationals, Sunday afternoon to be cancelled. "Cy" Williams and the rest of the Philly band arrived in Kingston shortly after noon, via the New York Central. When it was certain that the game would not be played the players left to continue their barnstorming tour.

Smashing Grid Games This Week

New York, Oct. 11 (AP)—Stirring intercollegiate battles and the first big games in the east with a definite bearing on the hopes of championship contenders furnish the incentive for drills this week on college battlefields.

The classic Yale struggle with Dartmouth at New Haven and the clash of Princeton and Navy in the Palmer Stadium will vie with the invasion of Pennsylvania University by Chicago, one of the powers of the west. On the same day Penn State will carry the honor of the east into the west against Kutztown. The Notre Dame eleven at South Bend, Ind.

The terror of the south, Tulane University, picked last year as one of the greatest eleven in the country, clashes here with New York University. Michigan State has an engagement with Ohio State clash with Columbia.

Army is due to tangle with Syracuse at West Point in an added attraction to perplex football fans of the state in choosing their Saturday sport fare.

A smashing battle is in prospect when Colgate invades the University of Pittsburgh in another of the eastern headlines.

Syracuse Will Play West Point

Syracuse, N. Y., Oct. 11.—Syracuse football followers see in the record of recent sports clashes between the Orange and Army a good omen for their football team which invades West Point next Saturday for one of the most important gridiron combats of the season.

Between the fall of 1925 and the spring of 1926, Syracuse and Army clashed in four different branches of sports and in three the Big Orange was victorious. Syracuse scored its first victory in basketball, hanging up its tenth straight conquest of the season at the Cadets' expense. Army won the boxing match and then Syracuse scored a victory in hockey. All three meets were held at West Point. When the baseball season arrived, Army invaded Archbold stadium and track clashes were scheduled between the two institutions but were cancelled because of the death of an Army athlete.

Saturday's game will be the first football contest between Army and Syracuse since 1919 when the Orange won a 7 to 3 victory on the Plains.

Yellow Jackets Win from West Point Team, 10-7

Vogt in Final Quarter Kicks Goal Giving Locals the Victory—Hoffman Scores Touchdown in First Period.

With the Yellow Jackets and the West Point Artillery eleven tied at 7-7 and both outfits playing nerve-racking football Sunday afternoon on the West Point gridiron, Captain "Punk" Vogt uncovered a much needed surprise for the Kingston gridders in the final quarter with a field goal, giving the locals a spectacular win by the score of 10 to 7.

The teams were fighting hard in the last quarter and it appeared as if the match would end in a deadlock, when Vogt, after several unsuccessful tries earlier in the game, booted the pigskin over the crossbar and gave his team the victory.

In the opening quarter Joe Hoffman gave the Yellow Jackets their first score by nabbing a forward pass from Vogt's hands and shooting across the chalk line for a touchdown. The team was far down the field, toward the enemy's line when Vogt shot a long spiral in Hoffman's direction. Joe easily catching the ball and running it across for a touchdown. Vogt then added the extra point with a kick between the goal posts.

The soldiers also gained their score by means of a forward pass. The Kingston men were moving up the field and when on their own thirty yard line the backfield resorted to overhead attacks. McNamee, the West Point fullback, grabbed a spiral meant for a Kingston end and sprinted within two yards of the Kingston goal line before he was brought to earth. The Kingston wall held hard but in three moves the soldiers worked the ball across with McNamee taking the pigskin. Ogan, the West Point right halfback, then added the extra point which tied the score.

In their scurrying tactics the Yellow Jackets advanced 130 yards to the West Point team's 35 yards. The Kingston back wall was much superior to the West Point backfield as the local huskies often broke away for five or ten yard runs and several times ran fifteen or twenty yards, while the soldiers never advanced the ball more than five yards at a time. The Kingstons had 21 first downs to 15 for the West Point eleven.

Wills-Sharkey Bout Tuesday

The odds on the Harry Wills-Jack Sharkey fifteen round heavyweight carnival that will close the outdoor fistic season tomorrow afternoon at Ebbets Field, are still at seven to five with the Black Panther as favorite. The Boston boy's great showing in the workouts has boosted his stock considerably, while Wills has been able to hold only a couple of points advantage in the betting.

Even this may be wiped out by tonight. Many are of the opinion that the price will be no better than even money when the boxers go into the ring. Certainly Sharkey has looked like an even money shot in his workouts. And considering his record, with his great victory over George Godfrey, the Peloponnese Shadow, he stands out more prominently to at least hold the challenger for world's heavyweight honors to an even break.

Cool-Headed Boy

Presence of mind shown by a boy scout assisted his rescuers as he lay pinned beneath an avalanche of building material, and won for him the praise of onlookers.

The Kansas City (Mo.) Post, commenting on the boy's grit, states: "Russell Powell, sixteen-year-old boy scout, showed a fine courage and demonstrated the practical and character-building value of scout training. In Mexico, Mo., when he was buried under several tons of mauling clay in a brickyard. Instead of struggling to free himself, and probably losing his life in the attempt, he lay still and watched the workmen as they removed the great mass of clay from his body. To do this required intelligence and courage."

Bury Street Crossings

Recent investigations indicate that Seventh and Broadway, Los Angeles, is the most congested intersection in the world. More than 300,000 persons pass this corner on street cars during a day of 24 hours. The pedestrian traffic reaches nearly 270,000 and the automobile congested traffic about 50,000, making a grand total of 620,000 persons in 24 hours. Other busy corners are Hyde Park corner, London; Fifth Avenue and Forty-second street, New York city; Times square, New York city; Columbus circle, New York city, and Place de l'Opera, Paris.

St. Louis Wild Over Victory

Big Celebration Planned Late Today For Homecoming Cardinals—One Killed, Four Injured While Mingling With Revelers.

St. Louis, Oct. 11 (AP)—Hope springing late reality with the Cardinals' triumphant 3 to 2 victory yesterday over the New York Yankees sent thousands upon thousands of baseball mad St. Louisians into a hysterical frenzy of celebration and today set their eyes toward the first opportunity of welcoming home a world champion baseball club.

Manager Rogers Hornsby and 17 of his champion crew are due to arrive at the home camp late today. Last night's boisterous celebration, which continued into the late hours, is expected only to rival the homecoming festivities that will be accorded the Red Birds. Jack Grosse, city register, and chairman of the committee which arranged last Monday's demonstration when the Cardinals brought the series fight to the home grounds, was making plans today to protect the returning batsmen from possible injury from over enthusiastic fans.

It is possible, Grosse intimated, that Hornsby and his men will depart from their train at some point in Illinois and be smuggled into town by taxicab. "It would be murder to let the men get off the train at Washington avenue or Union station," said Grosse. Last week's demonstration began when the Cardinals left their Pennsylvania special train at the Washington avenue stop.

Last night's merry-making took its toll. William Troll, Jr., 17, was killed when he was brushed into the street from the running board of an automobile, caught in a traffic jam. Four persons, including a policeman, were injured while mingling with the revelers. One, a girl, was critically injured when she was thrown from the hood of an automobile, where she had been riding.

CHANNEL SWIMMER WILL BECOME PRO

Vierkoetter Wants to Finance Modern Bakery.

Ernst Vierkoetter, the German channel swimmer, plans to turn professional.

He has been flooded with offers from America and England for exhibition swims and vaudeville tours. The offers total $100,000, but Vierkoetter says he wants only enough money to finance a modern bakery in Cologne. "While I have not accepted any specific offer," the swimmer said, "am selling for New York in October after giving my father and mother a vacation. I do not want to have to accept charity again, as I did at Calais. English friends even gave me the train fare home."

Vierkoetter saved for years to finance his attempt at the channel. His first attempt, on August 24, failed when he was within sight of his goal. Discouraged, he was preparing to leave Cape Gris Nez when he suddenly decided to ask the former crown prince, Frederick William, to take him as a sporting proposition. The crown prince, Vierkoetter made known after his record breaking swim on August 30, promptly remitted the necessary funds.

Vierkoetter arrived at his home in Cologne unrecognized, and immediately resumed his occupation as a baker. He said he planned to swim the Firth of Forth next year and then to swampt the channel again, accompanied by his wife, who is also a strong swimmer.

Vierkoetter has only one eye. He revealed that he had discovered the sight of the other with a burning scuffle in his infancy. The Vierkoetter have a baby, seven months old.

Cub Cast-Offs Help Cardinals

A great deal of the success of the St. Louis Cardinals in the race for the National league pennant has been due to the consistent work of Grover Cleveland Alexander (left) and Bob O'Farrell, two Chicago Cub cast-offs. The pitcher and catcher have done excellent work for Manager Hornsby.

Sporting Squibs

Peoria sold Outfielder Harry Layne to the St. Louis Cardinals. The price was given out as $5,000.

Purchase by the White Sox of Everett Purdy, outfielder of the Lincoln club of the Western league, is announced.

Manager Oscar Stange of Evansville was enriched $100 by reason of being selected the most valuable player to his club.

Harold Brittan, one of the cleverest center forwards in professional soccer, has signed to play with New Bedford of the American league.

Low Fowcra, in the National league for several seasons, prior to this spring, has been purchased by Cleveland from the Newark club of the International league.

William B. Friedlander, well-known theatrical producer, has lured Benny Leonard, the retired lightweight champion of the world, into the musical comedy ring this season.

President Davidson of the New England league announces that he has signed Eddie Shevlin, former New England welterweight champion, as an umpire in the New England league.

Washington has released Jimmy Smith, Salem (Ohio) semi-pro catcher, unconditionally. With the purchase of Brandon from Portsmouth of the Virginia league, Smith's services were no longer required.

Clarence Griffin, left-hand pitcher, now with the Memphis, Southern association, club, may be a Giant next year. Negotiations now are under way. It is understood, for the sale of Griffin to the New York club.

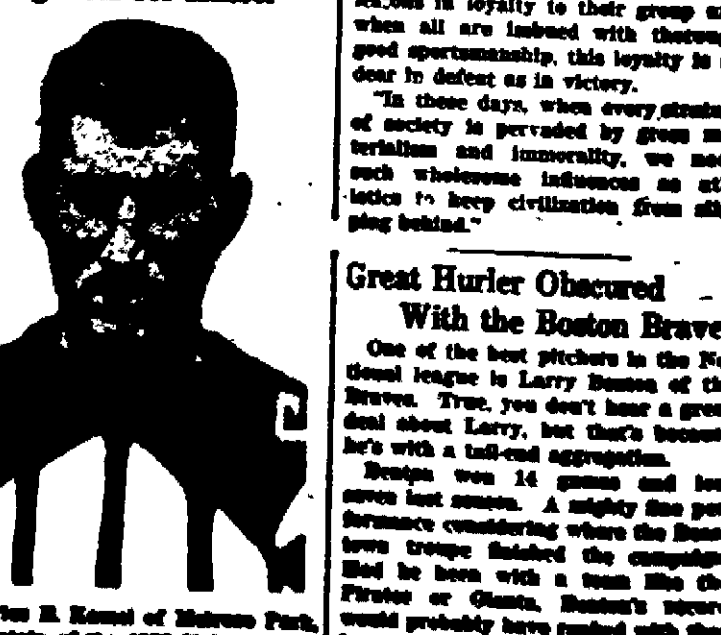

Harold Olsen, former Badger football and basketball star, has a new assignment at Ohio State university this year. In addition to coaching the basketball team, Oll will assist Jack Wilce with the grid squad.

John W. Heisman, veteran of twenty-four years' football coaching, is starting his third season at Rice institute, Houston, Texas, and is expected to produce a contender for the Southwestern Conference crown.

Cy Young's attempt to set a world's record for consecutive games pitched was shattered in 1927 after he had made a run of 15 by a home run by Mark Baldwin of the Pittsburgh club, who was a regular .397 hitter.

Danville purchased Dutch White, manager of the Cedar Rapids team of the Mississippi Valley league. He is reported to have been the youngest pilot in organized baseball this year, being but twenty-two years of age. White is an insider.

Big Year for Kassel

Charles E. Kassel of Monroe Park, Ill., captain of the 1926 University of Illinois football team, is looking forward to a great season. Last year "Chuck" was generally selected as "all-conference" and he has won two letters in basketball, playing at back guard.

Webster Made Change

Seah Webster, author of the "American Dictionary of the English Language," was responsible for the change in American of the "ver" ending to "er." Thus labor, however, laborer have become labor, laborer and laborer in this country.

Tod Sloan Best Jockey, Says Snapper Garrison

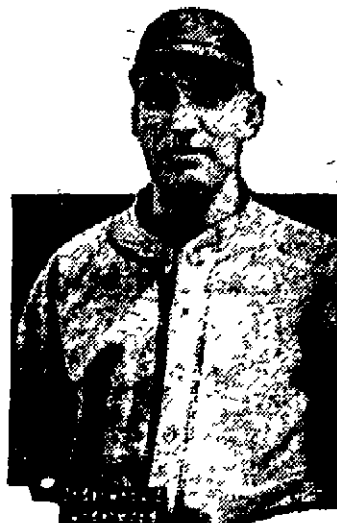

Into a gathering of horse owners and trainers, which had been discussing the prowess of two great former jockeys—Snapper Garrison and Isaac Murphy—walked the gray-haired Garrison himself not long ago.

"How about this question, of Murphy and you—did Isaac have anything on you in the saddle?" asked one trainer.

Garrison changed the subject. "There was just one great jockey," said "Snapper"—he of the Garrison finish. "That was Tod Sloan. Sloan had one great faculty—the ability to control animals. Not only horses, but all other animals. He could pick up a vicious cat or dog and have it as tame as you want it in five minutes."

"You can't be a great jockey without making the horse feel he has a firm friend in you. Horses will run their fastest for the jockeys they like. Sloan knew when to whip and when to scold. He was cool, had a fine pair of hands, a perfect seat and the knack of making a horse do his very best."

Captain Pie Traynor

Pie Traynor, who broke into the limelight when he smashed out a home run in the opening game of the world's series last year, has been appointed to succeed Max Carey as captain of the Pittsburgh Pirates. The recent shakeup caused the suspension of Max Carey without pay, and the unconditional release of "Babe" Adams and Carson Bigbee. The photograph is of Pie Traynor.

Wholesome Influence of Athletics Is Big Need

Opponents of intercollegiate athletics get little sympathy from Fielding H. Yost, director of athletics at the University of Michigan.

When asked recently of the relation of athletics to high schools, Yost said the country needed the wholesome influence of sports to keep civilization from slipping.

"Athletics in high schools," he said, "teach participants the lessons of endurance, skill, self-sacrifice and the necessity for constant work in order to excel."

"Athletics teach the student body lessons in loyalty to their group and when all are imbued with thorough good sportsmanship, this loyalty is as dear in defeat as in victory."

"In these days, when every stranger of society is pervaded by gross materialism and immorality, we need such wholesome influences as athletics to keep civilization from slipping behind."

Great Hurier Obscured With the Boston Braves

One of the best pitchers in the National league is Larry Dorman of the Braves. True, you don't hear a great deal about Larry, but that's because he's with a tail-end aggregation.

Braves won 14 games and lost seven last season. A mighty fine performance considering where the Braves were. Dorman was the team's first pitcher or closer. Dorman's record would probably have landed with that long up by Danny Vance.

Dorman has been looking forward to this season, but his record doesn't reveal exceptional pitching because he's dropped several tough games he really deserved to win through lack of being drilled him.

UP THE RHINE

Terraced Vineyards and Old Castles.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

TRAVELING up the Rhine on a canal boat is a somewhat comfortable way of traveling that German valley, but it affords a matchless shifting viewpoint for an enjoyment of the stream's justly famous scenery. After passing through the flat Dutch landscape one enters Germany near Emmerich and promptly begins to stumble on the German legends that cluster thickly on both banks of the Rhine. Nearby is Lohegrin's monument to commemorate the traditional rescue of Elsa by the knight. At a little distance, at Xanten, is the reputed birthplace of Siegfried, hero of the "Nibelungenlied."

Steaming further upstream one soon realizes that he is approaching the Ruhr district by the endless procession of barges, banded high with coal. The most spectacular time to pass the Ruhr is at night. The light of the up-leaping flames from its blast furnaces from time to time momentarily throws into relief that vast labyrinth of wharves, stacks, mills, railway tracks, and pit heads, where labor more than 2,000,000 men.

Oberhausen, Essen, Rheinfelden, Dusseldorf, Ruhrort, Melderich—these industrial centers follow so closely upon each other as to produce one colossal effect. The last three compose, in fact, one community, whose combined water fronts form what is probably the largest river harbor in the world.

The Ruhr district produces per year about 6,000,000 tons of pig iron and from 4,000,000 to 5,000,000 tons of steel. During 1924 its average monthly yield of coal was 5,000,000 metric tons. The five big groups of iron and steel manufacturers employ 1,500,000 men, while the coal workers number about 550,000.

The ancient compilers of the "Nibelungenlied," who feigned the Rhine underworld as alive with metal-working gnomes, would indeed rub their eyes could they behold how completely man's works on the Ruhr have dwarfed their poetic imaginings.

Cologne and Its Minster.

Quite a different spectacle greets one farther along, where Cologne's great cathedral spires tower over the Rhine like two fingers pointing the surrounding city to heaven.

Whether by reason of its superb position or its commanding loveliness, Cologne minster dominates its city almost overwhelmingly. One comes to regard it as some gorgeous Gothic flower, and the town as merely the nourishing soil which brought it forth. Radiating from the cathedral extend the tree-lined boulevards which, fifty years ago, arose out of Cologne the old, crooked-alleyed, whose tumble-down city walls were then razed to comport with the dignity of this great Rhine port.

But whatever route one may take, whether through the fashionable shopping district or down through the few remaining alleys of gabled house fronts, the cathedral's twin spires beckon one to return. And time and again one does return, to wander, awhile, through those great, dim spaces where groves of columns rise through an eternal twilight. Far overhead the outlining filer of stained glass gleams like a belt of sparkling jewels, while higher still are panes which infiltrate a pale-blue light.

It is as if the cathedral's interior were meant to typify a dark world down into which the radiance of heaven is always shining from afar.

Surprisingly, this masterpiece of Gothic architecture is in large part modern. It was begun in 1248 and languished for six centuries; then a fresh start was made in 1842. Legend relates that the original architect, Meister Gerhard von Rile, sold his soul to the Evil One, perished along with his plans, and continued to haunt the unfinished edifice until its completion, in 1880.

Above Cologne, at Rolandseck, are the remains of the castle where Roland died upon returning from the Crusades to find that his hideout had entered a convent; and all along the winding stretch that leads to Cologne are ruins and more ruins, each with its legend.

Rhine legend is a good deal like the story that beautifies many a Rhine river, which, lacking the legend, would often be overlooked in favor of the river's ever-changing magnificence.

Next Town and Old Castles.

For a day the crazy heights continue, now lapsing horizonward, now reassembling along the banks, as if in successive efforts to choke the Rhine. And, bend after bend, one sights red-roofed, slope-set towns. Each has its neat quay, its water-side inn, an ideal route for motor car or motor boat, jealously guarded from the encroachment of factory chimneys and advertising signs.

A momentary flattening of the banks shows Newwed, the home of the Moravian Brothers' self-governing settlement and once the school town of George Meredith, who later novelized his German experiences in "Harry Richmond."

Then up shoots the left-hand bank, culminating in the fortress of Ehrenbreitstein. Opposite, wedged in triangularly at the confluence of the Rhine and the Moselle, lies Coblenz. Confronted, the Romans called the place. It has always been an important military stronghold, from the far-off days down to the occupation following the World war, when from early in December, 1918, to January 24, 1923, the Stars and Stripes flew from Ehrenbreitstein.

Just beyond Coblenz is cheery little Rheins. With its single street of half-timbered house fronts painted over with drinking scenes, its carved gnomes and dogs upholding the door lintels, its swing signs announcing So-and-so, the "master builder" or "master tailor," Rheins seems less like a living town than like a stage setting for a market-place act of German opera.

On goes the boat up the river's magnificent, canyonlike course. But Rhine folk do not permit perpendicular scenery to interfere with the business of grape-growing. From Bonn to Mainz is an almost continuous vista of the vine—armies of grape-hung stakes rising on cliffs' flanks and in the valleys between—a riverside vineyard 90 miles long.

As you pass the Lurlei, any Germans aboard are sure to burst into Heine's line, "Ich weiss nicht was soll es bedeuten," but Americans are more likely to speculate as to whether the nymph's siren song, to have reached mariners passing 490 feet below her cliff, was transmitted by megaphone. Poor Lorelei! Her song has been supplanted by the locomotive's shriek, and her classic rock has been tunneled by unholy railway engineers.

The boat passes Bingen where the Legionnaire of the ballad was born, then anchors near the broad esplanade at Mainz.

The city is almost entirely modern, save for the cathedral and its surrounding market place, a scene which probably looks much as it did in the days of Mainz' two most distinguished citizens, Heinrich von Meissen, the poet, and Johann Gutenberg, the printer.

On to Strasbourg.

On and on one steams through the ever-changing scene, until near Karlsruhe he comes to the point where France appears on the west bank. From this point for the next 30 miles to Strasbourg one steams along between French and German territory.

A stroll around Strasbourg will reveal, in a kind of lagoon where three canals meet, barges moving to and from such widespread points as Marseille, Paris, and Amsterdam. In fact, Strasbourg is a nexus of waterways. The Rhine, Rhine, Moselle, Marne, Seine and Rhone all contribute segments to a great circle of canals which has Strasbourg on its eastern circumference.

This ancient Celtic town still justifies, therefore, its historic name of Stratsburgum, or Town-on-the-Router. At noon the visitor repairs to the cathedral to see the functioning of its curious astronomical clock, with its parading figures of the Apostles, its crowing cock, its skeleton strider of the hours, its seven pagan deities symbolizing the days of the week—the whole suggesting the quaint conceits of German tarsnappers.

Rising like some ancient landmark between France and Germany, Strasbourg cathedral reveals, quite naturally, art influences of both countries. Its rich beauty was created through-out some 250 years by master architects from several countries; and a dizzy height the scratched names of many distinguished pilgrims, including Voltaire and Goethe, from both sides of the Rhine. In these several scenes it might be called an international cathedral.

Financial and Commercial

New York, Oct. 11 (AP).—The stock market today was subjected to another severe decline movement, as bear traders renewed their attack upon prominent industrial shares, and forced liquidation took place in many sections of the list. Extreme declines of one to six points were recorded before signs of resistance appeared. Trading was of an extremely nervous character throughout.

Wide spread discussion of the possible adverse effects upon general business of the collapse in cotton prices was one of the chief weapons used by speculators for the decline in hammering stocks. Fears of a contraction in credit facilities also were expressed as call money held to five per cent in the face of larger surplus reserves reported by the New York banks.

U. S. Steel, which recently sold at the year's high of 159½, sagged to 140½, the lowest in several months, and General Motors dropped back to around 148 compared with its recent top of 173½. The Van Sweringen rail issues were conspicuously weak, probably in reflection to the delay in overcoming minority opposition to the Nickel Plate merger plan.

Announcements of further cuts in automobile prices unsettled some of the motor shares, and various food, public utility, equipment, tobacco and amusement issues were unloaded in large volume.

Wheat Flour as Food Older Than History

The use of wheat for human food antedates history. It is probable that wheat was too expensive to be used by all the people and hence was used only by the more well-to-do. It thus early became a sign of aristocracy to be able to use wheat as food. Wheat has from early times been a measure of advancing civilization. Barley was one of the early cereals used by the peasantry. We read that Ruth gleaned after the harvesters of Boaz and that it was a barley harvest.

Man soon found that the inside of the cereal grains was better than the outside. He developed tools for crushing the grains and separating the seed coat from the inside portion. This art was probably learned almost as early as the cultivation of grains. The early legends tell us that the goddess Ceres, who taught man the art of agriculture, also taught man how to grind the grains.

Ancient literature speaks of the excellence of the sifted meal. We know that this sifting must have been very crude when compared with our modern sifting on silk bolting cloth. The sifted fine meal or flour was recognized as a food that belonged to the delicatessen class.

When Abraham, the founder of the Hebrew race, entertained angels unaware, he bade his wife, Sarah, "make quickly, three measures of fine meal, knead it and make cakes upon the hearth." We also read that Abraham's nephew, Lot, made a feast and baked unleavened bread. Bread is mentioned as one of the important items of a feast.

The name of Solomon stands in ancient times for splendor, wealth and luxury. Among Solomon's daily provisions are mentioned fine flour and meal. It would be interesting to know the ash content of Solomon's flour. It probably would not pass as very high-grade flour on the ash content.

People who say that it is the modern mill that has taken the best portion out of the grain, would have something to learn from history if they would go back to the old records. The sifting of the outside of the grain from the inside is an art that antedates Greek and Roman civilization.—C. O. Swenson in the National Miller.

Couldn't Fit Him

Army quartermasters rarely find it difficult to supply uniforms for soldiers of ordinary proportions, but they were recently presented with a case that upset even their wildest calculations in length, breadth and thickness, says the Washington Star.

It was that of a soldier of the National Guard, whose measurements were given as: height, 5 feet 1 inch; weight, 265 pounds; chest and waist, each 56 inches, and seat measurement, 64 inches. It was a big contract, but will be met by special treatment.

Up to this time the largest uniform for which standard patterns had been prepared was for a man 6 feet in height, weighing 175 pounds, with a 44-inch chest, 40-inch waist and 45-inch seat.

Huge Meteorite

A ship sailed into port at Aberdeen, Scotland, recently, bearing a strange load, a seven-ton rock said to be worth half a million dollars, says Popular Science Monthly. It was a gigantic meteorite on its way to a museum in Copenhagen, Denmark.

Dr. Knud Rasmussen, an explorer of the Far North, discovered the huge meteorite in 1918 in an out-of-the-way place in Greenland, 16 miles inland. Getting it out and sending it to Denmark was too difficult a task at that time. It took the united efforts of 170 dogs to drag it, as its great weight constantly broke through the ice.

This meteorite is said to be the third largest in the world. The two larger ones are in America and England.

Baltic Shale Rich in Oil

Tests of oil-bearing rock found in the Baltic regions have shown that it contains 75 gallons to the ton, of which 80 to 90 per cent can be extracted, according to Popular Mechanics. This is said to be about twice the possible recovery from American shale.

Improved processes of separating the oil at a California plant have enabled the product to be marketed in competition with the well oil. It is being used as fuel for locomotives and for an ore extraction plant. After the shale is mined, it is crushed, heated in large steel retorts and the distilled oil drawn off in storage tanks. Gases are cleaned and cooled and more oil taken from them. The spent shale is made into fire and insulating brick.
